Government Will Buy Horses of Didsbury Farmers

The Pioneer has been notified that the Canadian Government has arranged for meetings for the purchase of military horses in Didsbury on Friday, Feb ruary 19th, foller particulars of which can be seen in our advertising columns. The purchaser for the government in this district will be E. J. Legg, of Calgary, and Dr. Walters, Veterinary.

The government have done away with the middlemen altogether in their efforts to give the farmer all there is coming to them, consequently it is to be hoped that they will support the government by bringing in any horses they may have for sale so that the trouble of the middleman may be

In a letter to the Manitoba Grain Grower's Association Lt. Col. A. D. AlcRae, Chief Remount Commissioner, Winnipeg, states that he would like it understood that the government are buying horses on their nerits and that there is no fixed price, they want the nest horses and are prepared to pay a fair price for them.

This method of buying horses for military purposes is a new departure and is done for the purpose of eliminating the middleman and speculator so that the farmer will derive all benefits from the sale of his horses.

If any other information is wanted the Pioneer will be only too glad to give same to its readers in the district, and it is hoped that the farmers will take advantage of this sale in Didsbury because there was some objection before because no arrangements had been made for purchasing horses here.

THE INDIANS' GRIEF "Bobs" Had Warm Place in the Heart of the Soldier

The last visit of Lord Roberts to the army in the field is described in a communique issued by the Press Bureau. The aged field marshal paid visits to headquarters of divisions and those of the cavalry. "At each place two men from each unit, British and Indian were drawn up for inspection. those of the cavalry. "At each place two men from each unit, British and Indian, were drawn up for inspection, and the field marshal paused here and there with a kindly question, in Hindustani, which was keenly appreciated by those who had the honor to represent their corps. Nearly every man had come straight from the trenches; but in spite of the severe strain which they have undergone they looked keen, hard and soldierly. At each halt Lord Roberts said a few words of welcome and encouragement to the officers assembled to meet him, bidding them as their colonel in chief to remember that the Indian corps, the first imperial contribution to the empire's armies in the field, would be joined by other contingents one and all determined to bring the struggle against a powerful and relentless enemy to the only possible conclusion."

The news of Lord Roberts' death was reecived everywhere with expressions of profound grief, and spread so quickly among the Indian officers and rank and file that there were few who had not heard it at the extreme flank of the corps line before the day was far advanced. Only one other Englishman has attained to anything near the place which Lord Roberts filled in the heart of the Indian soldier, and that was John Nicholson. But it is safe to say that the devotion to Lord Roberts has had a measure of human

Atrocities by Germans Told

Belgians Now Breaking Silence-Were Afraid of Huns to Talk

Belgians, who formerly were afraid to talk of German atrocities, are gradually breaking their silence.

At Andenne, which was practically destroyed, according to Alfred Lens, a Belgian, the Germans killed 400 civilians, many of whom we: 3 business men.

ilians, many of whom we: business men.

"The chief of police told me," said Mr. Lens, "that 65 civilians were locked in a church and told that they would be shot within 30 minutes. Every five minutes a soldier would enter to remind the unfortunate that they had so many minutes left to live. When the half hour had expired, all were brought out led before a file of soldiers and lined up in a row.

"Some wished to cover their eyes, but the soldiers forced down their arms with bayonets. They were kept in this agony of suspense for another half an hour, before the order was given to fire. So flerce were the repeated volleys that the dead were hardly recognizable. Any who showed signs of life were promptly despatched either with the butt end of a rifle, or a bayonet.

"The town was thoroughly looted, the soldiers sparing not even the homes of the poor, while the jewelery shops were stripped of their stocks. Two hundred and eight houses were set on fire.

shops were stripped of their stocks. Two hundred and eight houses were set on fire.

"I counted in a ditch 233 civilians who had been shot.

"In Dinant, civilians, as the world has already heard, perished by the hundreds. Perhaps 1,000 were killed. The men were shot in the presence of their wives and children. They were first riddled with rifle bullets and then cut into shreds by machine gun fire.

"The commander adopted a lofty tone in regard to the whole matter, asserting that these methods were necessary in order that the Belgian nation might be properly impressed. He was to refrain from acts calculated to prolong the horrors of war. He said that the Belgians had killed enough Germans in Liege and 'sniped' enough unsuspecting soldiers to warrant 'any sort of retribution whatever."

ROUNDED UP UHLANS

Exciting Sport With Aeroplane and Motor Cars

A vivid story of a chase of Uhlans is given by an officer of the Army Medical Corps, in a letter to friends in Birmingham. He says: One of our naval aviators dropped in to breakfast the other day. He has been having a topping time in conjunction with the armoured cars. When we got here the district was overrun by small parties of Uhlans, who were a nuisance, so the naval man collected a few good English motor cars, put bits of steel plate round them, and followed the aeroplane round the country.

The American commission for relief work: in Belgium, which is composed of representatives of the United States, Italy and Spain, acting under the authority of all belligerent governments, desire to express their appreciation of Canada's magnificent response to Belgium's cry of distress. 'He gives twice who gives quickly,' was never better proven than it was by Canada, from which Dominion assistance was quickly rendered.

"The difficulty of procuring food supplies in Europe and the necessities of the people in Belgium increase almost proportionately, until the hope of help is gradually being narrowed to reliance upon the generosity of those who live on the North American continent. Thousands of tons of supplies, including those brought by the Nova Scotlan ship Tremovrah, have been distributed, yet there are pitiful requests for assistance from small and large Belgian villages.

"To supply the actual necessities of the geven million people remaining in Belgium, reliable authorities estimate that 80,000 tons of foodstuffs will be required throughout the winter, corn, cornmend, beans, peas, potatoes, biscuits bacon and money, "The freight and all shipping expenses on every cargo of such supples will gladdy be paid by the commission for relief, who will also pay all expenses incurred in the actual distribution of the supplies in Belgium. Child Prodigies a Danger

Precocity Indicates One-Sided Development

Says Lewis M. Terman in the

Says Lewis M. Terman in the Forum:

All writers on the precocity of genius have noted the frequency with which it is confined to particular lines, while in other respects there may be no unusual promise. The mathematical prodigies, for example are, as a class, notoriously one-sided in their ability, as are also the wonder children of music and the stage. The precocity of the latter is confined chiefly to their emotional development.

The narrowing of interests and talents is always an event to be deplored, and against its premature appearance parents and teachers should religiously stand guard. Sometimes children who could be fitted for quiet and useful lives are "staged" on account of some insignificant gift of nature, such as ability to perform feats of memory or of arithmetical calculation, with the result that all the other interests atrophy and the personality dries up. The emotions become distorted, and nothing remains but a caricature of what a human being should be. Under this kind of treatment even the rudiments of common sense sometimes disappear, leaving the person practically an imbecile in all respects except his particular gift.

Officer Devoured Chunk of Bread Lying in the Road

Ing in the Road

"We had a nightmare walk for nine days and nights, with hardly a rest," says a British officer.

"I don't think we ever had three hours all told to eat or sleep. As for eating, it was seldom we could boil water for tea, and our meat had to be thrown away because we could not arrange to cook it. For several days together I, at least, never had any meat, and walked my boots off. I sometimes fell on my knees from sheer exhaustion, but after a little rest began the eternal tramp again.

"For the last two days I had practically if not literally, nothing to cat and no sleep. And then I saw a chunk of bread lying by the road-side. I rushed at it, and a chauffer in a motor car a little further on asked me, 'Are you hungry, sir?' I replied that I thought I was, and he produced a pot of apricot jam and threw it to me. If you believe me, I actually cried for hunger, and the tears bursout as I devoured that blessed lon and jam."

Not that she was in the least hungry, but she knew that there was senes in keeping up her strength, and with all her sweetness and her pure angelic nature, she had a real fund of commonsense, which never deserted her at any crisis in her life. She therefore sat down, having first carefully examined the room, which was very dirty. There was a large double bed in one corner, which looked most uninviting, and which made Barbara shiver even to glance at—so dark were the blankets, so almost black the counterpane, so revolting the whole appearance of the bed. Then

"My word! But there's not a scrap

"Look ye 'ere, child—ef you was to keep in that position till this time tomorrow, I could no more let yer free than I could fly; so just you get up; heat your vittles, keep yer strength, and no 'arm will come to yer. Mrs. Johnson aln't a bad sort, when all's said and done, but interfere with her—my word! I might as well give up my life. Even my life wouldn't be worth an hour's purchase. There was a bump on the stairs and someone knocked.

Barbara looked up her heart for a moment almost stopped beating. The next minute the door was opened, and Kate Jessop appeared. Barbara, with a strangled cry, flung herself into Kate's arms.

"Kate, Kate, Kate! you have come to save me! You will save me, won't you?"

"Of course, she will save me, won't you?"

"Of course, she will save you, my dear, that's what she has come for. She can do what I can't. But first of all you must bear with me for a time. We are, all three of us, going to Paris tonight. I know that you haven't enough clothes, and you can't travel without luggage; go I have got Kate to buy you this very neat little trunk. Let me see what you have chosen. Kate."

The clothes, unsuitable according to Barbara's dainty ideas, were produced, but the girl was now so sunk in misery, that she hardly knew what was put before her. She sank down speechless, dull, almost stupid, on her chair. Mrs. Johnson bustled about; Kate said:

"Well, ma'am, if we are to get off tonight, I'd best go to my digs and bring my bits o' duds along."

Soldier Died as Bravely as Brave Man Should

Brave Man Should

How a straggling British soldier was captured and shot by Germans unjustly as a spy is narrated by a United States war correspondent who witnessed the execution.

"It happened at a village near Nieuport, he says. I was in my quarters when I heard the soldiers outside the door crying out 'Englisch! Englisch!' I ran out and saw some Uhlans bringing in a man dressed in civillan clothes but wearing a khaki shirt. He was unmistakably a British soldier. He was a big, blonde fellow, woefully dirty, unshaven, his hair all matted.

a big, blonde fellow, woefully dirty, unshaven, his hair all matted.

"Some of the German soldiers who knew English pointed at him, shouting to me, 'Spy! Spy!' I followed the little procession as far as a farmhouse where the headquarters of this German outpost were. I knew the fellow was English, you know, and I wanted to see fair.

"They told me they had caught him spying, and had taken a lot of plans and notes away from him. I didn't know anything about the man myself, not even the name of his regiment, except that I could tell by his appearance that he was not an officer—for all I know he may simply have been one of the English who were cut off in the retreat from Antwerp and was trying to make the British or Belgian lines.

"They were in the house about an hour. Then they brought him out, just four men with loaded riftes and an officer. He was not bound, but walked quite free between his guards, very straight and calm and quite unmoved.

"At the sight of that Englishman going to his death with eyes shining, head up and shoulders squared, the tears fairly came into my eyes. I forgot all about being a neutral, all about the Germans and and just felt I couldn't bear to see what was going to come. As he passed me I said aloud—I felt I had to speak—'Goodbye, old chap, and good luck!' He just turned his head and looked at me and smiled a little smile as if to thank me and to say he did not mind.

"They stood him up in the middle of the road. Away in the distance, down the road a German regiment was coming along with noisy drums and ffee. As the firing squad—just the four guards—stood back to take up their position—the Englishman drew himself up at attention with a click of the heels, braced his shoulders and threw up his head, game and brave to the last. It was all over in a second.

Tommy Atkin's War Bread

Part of the Durable Rations Carried by Soldiera While on the March

March

Nevery army in time of war carries what is called war bread, which forms a part of the durable rations, and is intended to be eaten if necessary while on the march. The German soldier receives for his war bread a zwieback, in which are mixed together 100 grammes of raised dough and 10 grammes of cooked rice together with salt. Beaten eggs and sugar are added to the dough in order to improve its flavor, and to increase the nourishing power. The proportion is 500 eggs to 100 kilogrammes of flour. Finally, potatoflour is used, it is said, to prevent the bread from growing stale too casily, and caraway seed gives it the necessary spiciness.

the bread from growing stale too casily, and caraway seed gives it the necessary spiciness.

The Austro-Hungarian soldiers carry their durable ration of bread packed in small cotton bags. This bread is shaped like a sausage, and consists of wheat flour, potato flour, eggs, unskimmed milk, malt, cinnamon, nutmeg and yeast.

In France cach soldier receives as his durable ration ten loaves of bread, each of which is 70 millimetres long, 65 millimetres broad, and 25 millimetres thick. In any case, this bread does not taste as good, nor is it as nourishing as the Austrian bread, for the "piou-piou," as the French infantry man is called, must be satisfied with a loaf which is made only of flour, yeast and water.

The war bread of the Italians and Roumanians is very similar to that of France. It is, though, somewhat iarker and has a uniformly smooth crust.

The Swiss soldier carries his war bread with him in a small paste-board-box. Each of these little pack-ages contains five small loaves, which weigh altogether only 250 contains five small loweigh altogether only grammes.

The light colored war bread of the English is kept in good condition in small soldered tin boxes.

small soldered tin boxes.

The Belgians give their soldiers a war bread made of flour, sugar and eggs, each loaf having forty punctures. Holes are also pierced through the Thrkish war bread, which is made in round disks, having a diameter of 150 millimetres, and a very thick brown crust.

FRESH AIR NECESSARY

Contributed by Dr. Heber Jamieson, Professor of Bacteriology in the University of Alberta

University of Alberta

Fresh air is an absolute essential to good health. The lung takes from the atmosphere one of its gases—oxygen, which is used to keep the system in its normal state. Every breath we take in carries the necessary oxygen to the small air cells in the lungs. Every breath we send out is charged with another gas which is thrown off by the body cells as waste material.

The transfer of these two saces is is charged with another gas which is thrown off by the body cells as waste material.

The transfer of these two cases is made between the lungs and the small cells of which the whole body is made by means of red corpuscles of the blood. These little messengers must be healthy in order to do their work well and sufficient numbers must be maintained to give the best service. If a person becomes anaemic there is a falling off in the numbersof the red cells. As each one of these can carry only a certain amount of oxygen at a time the body suffers in consequence of the diminished supply. Every room contains a certain amount of oxygen and when that is exhausted the body suffers. The air inhaled now contains the waste gas which we have just disposed of and we must therefore take it into our lungs again and try to impose this on the blood cells. They are not to be deluded and if the imposition is persisted in the person faints for lack of the life sustaining oxygen.

The more people there are breathing the same air the sooner it is vitiated. In the country the atmosphere is more pure. It has been said that it is kept pure by the farmers keeping the foul air shut up in their houses. What truth there may have been in this statement, as to the conservation of impure air in the rural districts, the reader can judge for himself. The dweller in cities is no less a sinner when he sleeps in a room with the windows closed "because the night air is bad" forgetting that night air was designed for night breathing and is preferable to stale day air.

War Tourist's Friend

Baedeker, One of the War's Victims, Was Guide Book Man

Was Guide Book Man

Tourists all the world over read with sympathetic interest the report that Herr Karl Baedeker, the publisher of the famous guide books, had been killed in action. This member of the Baedeker family was one of the grandsons of old Karl Baedeker, who was born at Easen in 1801, where his father had carried on a business of printer and bookseller, and who himself started in business in 1827 at Coblentz, where he died just over fifty years ago. His grave in that town is often visited by tourists.

It was old Karl Baedeker who first hit upon the idea of publishing a series of guide books for the different countries. The first guide book published by Baedeker was a small book on the Rhine, of which in 1839 he produced a third edition entirely re-written by himself. Since then guide books for Belgium, Holland, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, the United States, etc., have been published in the principal languages of Europe, until today the word "Baedeker" has become almost a synonym for guide books.

'Get Cover, Boye; They Are Firing

"Get Cover, Boye; They Are Firing at You."

"Fancy being shelled by a heavy battery for six weeks and only one man killed. They have fired almost a thousand shells. Last night they attacked us here, but were driven back with a loss of 600 killed and wounded. I suppose you read in the papers about one of our outcers being killed. This was Lord Arthur Hay. I was next him when he lost his life. The Irish Guards were ordered to attack a hill on which a party of Germans had been posted. The hill was covered with thick woods and there were German anipers up the trees and anywhere they could post themselves.

"We came in contact with Lord Arthur Hay and a company of men. He asked what company I belonged to. I replied, 'No. 1, sir!' 'Well,' he remarked, 'get off to your left.' No sooner did I move away than a bullet, skimming my arm, struck Lord Arthur in the stomach. He fell like a log. I lay down a few feet from him, and after several minutes another fellow came crawling towards me, and together we tried to remove Lord Arthur.

"When we touched him he opened his eyes and said, 'Get cover, boys; they are firing at you.' We took him from the ground, and, as we were raising him, a second bullet came between myself and my companion and struck Lord Arthur in the back. It passed through his chest, tearing his coat as it came out. A minute later a brave man had died.—Private John Brady, 1st Irish Guards.

Comes tripping along down the middle
'Tween dancers a-row,
How her flashing eyes glow,
As she treads to the tune of the fiddle!

Ah, pert little flirt
Of the witchery skirt,
Your wiles so alluringly tender
Send wine to the head
Of the rustics who tread
Spellbound by your ankles so stender!

With lips in a curve,
As you posture and swerve,
smile on each gallant entrancing.
With coquettlsh art

You are playing your part And treading on hearts with your dancing.

Ah, sweet New Year's maid, In the yellow brocade,

Tonight you are dancing as sprightly
In the firelight glow
As you did long ago—
And you tread on the hearts, ah, as lightly!

Protecting Implements From Rust A correspondent of the Breeders Magazine gives this advice on this sub ject:

 Ilousing fails because it does not keep the rioisture laden atmosphere from contact with the surface of the steel. There are many cheap gummy or oily substances that will protect a bright plough or hoe or other farm tool. I have found heavy unrefined oil effective and easily applied. Axle grease is used so generally for waggens that many farmers apply that. It is more expensive and more difficult to spread so as to cover the entire surface of the tool. Unrefined cottonseed oil and the low grade catsor oil spread readily and carry gum and oil enough to dry slowly and cover well, and they do not dry so hard as linseed oil, which prevents the plough or hoe from scouring readily.

A barrel of heavy lubricating oil on the farm will save any further outlay for axle grease or machine oil. It is good for killing vermin on animals and for protecting tools from rust—if only we get the men to apply it. ject: Housing fails because it does not

In some cases they cause vomiting through their action in an unsound stomach, but this is only a manifestation of their cleansing power, no indication that they are hurtful. They can be thoroughly depended upon to clear all worms from the system.

EPOCH IN MODERN WARFARE

Germans Try Steel Jackets Against British Rifles

British Rifica

For the first time in modern warfare the Germans made use near Armentieres of armoured jackets for infantry: heavy steel cuirasses reaching from the shoulders nearly down to the knee.

In these they march slowly forward till they reach the very edge of a trench, "looking like blooming tortoises," said a Tommy Atkins. "But we have the bayonet ready for 'em when they get to us," he went on, "and we sha'n't have anything to fear from 'shelly-bellies,' unless perhaps in a night attack."

This modern revival of the old Roman armed foot soldier marks an epoch in modern warfare.

What Will be Done With Refugees

Prom Belgium?

The question of the repatriation of the Belgian refugees in England has been under consideration for some time. There has been a certain division on this subject in the Belgian cabinet itself, one view being that the people should be sent back to the big dities like Antwerp, and ordinary commercial life resumed.

There are others who hold the view that if the people do return it is impossible that commercial and business life can resume its normal courses under present circumstances, and moreover, that it would be extremely undesirable to have the ruined cities and villages re-populated at present, as they are likely to surfer greatly when once again they become the scene of sanguinary lighting, as the allies advance to drive the Germans out of Belgium. This is the predominant view of Belgian ministers and municipal authorities.

Back at Them

Labor unions were strong in his city. On Hallowe'en the boys pulled a lot of pickets off the fence of the union barber and made a bonfire of them. The barber bought some pickets and nailed them onto his fence himself. Whereupon he was promptly fined $50 by the council for doing carpenter work which should have been done by a union carpenter.

The barber thought this over for some time. Then he presented the carpenters' union with a bill for $1,375.

"What's this for?" asked the chief of the carpenters' union.

Russian Women Are Very Eager to Get Into Battle Line

The army authorities are having their troubles discovering and sending back to their homes women who have volunteered in the ranks disguised as men. There have been numerous in stances of the kind since the war started, especially among the masculine looking peasant women of the northern provinces.

One of these was Nadezhda Ornats, ky, a muscular, well educated peasant woman from the province of Archangel. She had posed as a man through the second part of the Manchurian campaign, and was praised for her courage by General Grippenbeg. Early in the present war she recellisted and fought in South Poland, and it was not until after the battle of Lublin-Krasnick that her sex was discovered and she was discharged.

A girl named Liuba Uglicki was present at four engagements in East Prussia and West Poland, and was wounded slightly. She says that during long range fighting she had no fear, but had a horror of crossing bayonets with the enemy.

Hemer, of the Manitoba Agricultural College, the opportunity into poultry and eggs, and the unlimited market demand for these poultry products at his very door, tuen we be gin to realise the immense possibilitions all men who enlist must be sound ties of the industry for developing into mentally and physically in every detail a distinct and profitable branch of western farming. In some of the countries where the industry has reached its highest state of development the difficulties were at first lar greater and more extreme than those precented by the conditions in the Province of Manitoba.

We need only refer to the markets and eggs is unlimited, compared to ome of the markets of other countries which had to be developed first. Our markets are at the present time sup-plied with poultry and eggs, a large percentage of which are produced outside of the province. Were this production turned over to the Manito farmers we can readily see what effect it would have on the industry and its importance as a distinct branch of western agriculture.
